Dear Bill,

I am writing to express my thanks and appreciation, personally and on behalf of the United States Intelligence Community as a whole, for the service which you rendered as a member of the Advisory Commission on Multidisciplinary Counterintelligence Analysis.

The problems which your Commission examined were both complex and controversial. They involved organizational relationships of considerable intricacy and sensitivity.

I am fully aware of the personal commitment of time which your protracted and thorough investigation of these problems involved. Your recommendations have led to organizational decisions which I believe constitute substantial improvement in the structure of the intelligence community. These organizational improvements should have a significant and favorable effect on the security of the United States.

The successful consummation of your Commission's mission reflects most favorably the personal qualities, experience and objective judgment which you contributed to the Commission's work.

I understand that Dupont willingly shared your services with no charge to the government, and I will also be passing on my appreciation to Mr. Jefferson.

Sincerely,

William J. Casey
